

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been in the service for over 14 years. I am a Gulf War veteran and have fought beside many of the soldiers currently in the Middle East. I have 2 children one is 13 and the other 20 and serving in the Army. I get so tired of hearing special interest groups and other organizations such as ACLU and National Association of Broadcasters, whine about how everybody is stepping on this or that. I am an XM subscriber and the reason for this is because the quality and variety I get with XM far surpasses that of local broadcast stations. I pay a fee for this service and I expect to get the best out of it to include local traffic and weather if I need it. What next people who subscribe to cable or satellite television shouldn't get the weather channel? It's a service and I pay for it. I work hard and serve my country so I and many others can enjoy the benefits of such a great company like XM. Please in the interest in a free capitalistic/market society I ask that you tell these Broadcasters to quit whining. Let's face it those of us who have XM are people who are tired of listening to the numerous commercials, limited programming and traffic and weather forecasting that only occurs during rush hour and bad storms. Lastly, those of us who have satellite radio never listen to local broadcast any more. Because when the traffic is bad and the weather stinks we have reception and choice which makes all that obsolete anyway.
